Advance Directives

FOR: Patients and staff.

A perfect addition for your cable programming or patient education library. This video helps you comply with the law by informing patients of their right to formulate advance directives.

Viewers learn

- The two types of advance directives:
- The living will
  - Durable power of attorney for healthcare

While this video speaks directly to patients, you will want all of your nursing and medical staff to see it. They will understand this sensitive subject. It also provides medical personnel with information they need to communicate with their patients.

Patients will see that they have the right to be informed and to make choices about their care. They can accept or refuse treatment. This right continues even after the patient becomes incapacitated. They can communicate their desires with advance directives.

A “living will” takes effect if the patient is incapacitated. It communicates the patient’s desires to healthcare providers. A durable power of attorney names individuals who will make decisions on behalf of the patient.

This video encourages patients to talk with their family and physician about their healthcare desires. By formulating advance directives, they will gain a sense of comfort and control. They will also be relieving their family of a significant burden. Making decisions for another is always difficult in the absence of clear directions.
